

Eric Braverman

---

Jump to: navigation, search

Contents

[hide]

- 1 Public life
  - o 1.1 Bio from Yale School of Management
- 2 Role in #Pizzagate
  - o 2.1 Former CEO of Clinton Foundation attempts to blow whistle on the organization
  - o 2.2 Still missing
- 3 See also

Public life

---

Bio from Yale School of Management

Eric Braverman was chief executive officer of the Clinton Foundation from 2013 to 2015. At the Foundation, Braverman led an effort to help ensure long-term sustainability—securing an endowment, transforming the organization’s use of data, establishing governance practices to reflect changing laws and public expectations, consolidating entities, and creating professional development for staff.

Previously, Braverman served as a partner at McKinsey & Company, where he advised leaders in the public, private, and non-profit sectors on strategy, organization, and operations. Named by Fortune magazine in 2010 as one of the “40 Most Influential Leaders in Business” worldwide under 40 years old, Braverman co-founded McKinsey’s public sector practice and directed its work on government innovation globally. He also served as an advisor on performance management and technology for President Obama’s transition team in 2008.

Braverman is a frequent speaker on government at events, conferences, and seminars around the world—both in academic and practitioner-oriented settings—focusing particularly on innovation in government and the importance of partnership between the public, private, and nonprofit sectors to improve lives.

Role in #Pizzagate

---

Former CEO of Clinton Foundation attempts to blow whistle on the organization

In this investigation, there are many ties back to the Clinton Foundation. Braverman was CEO of the Clinton Foundation before abruptly resigning in 2015. He is currently unaccounted for and has been missing since mid October 2016.[\[1\]\(archived version\)](#)

Still missing

Despite attempts by Snopes on January 2, 2017 to put the story to rest, Eric Braverman did not respond to calls or emails and Snopes was unable to definitely prove if this public figure could even be found.[\[2\]\(archived version\)](#) CEO Eric Braverman had an ongoing rift with "the old Clinton guard" regarding the governance of the Clinton Foundation and he would resign in March 2015.

At the time that he joined, there were many concerns about the Foundation's fundraising efforts and the acceptance of contributions from foreign governments while Hillary Clinton was Secretary of State, Politico reported.<sup>[3]</sup> \(archived version\) Braverman has been missing since mid-October 2016. Speculation is that he is in FBI custody, sought Russian asylum, or is dead. Braverman is mentioned many times in the Podesta emails, specifically in regard to his and Chelsea's ongoing differences with Bill Clinton's right hand man, Doug Band, over the governance of the Clinton Foundation.

See also

---

- Bill Clinton
- Clinton Foundation
- Hillary Clinton
- John Podesta
- Podesta emails